Well, for one thing the controls are just awkward. I had to double click everything with a little black pointer, but I had to use the mouse to look around. So I'd end up looking at a wall while trying to click one of the objects. And the ending is just bad. Very bad. Any semblance of subtlety the game had going for it (not a lot) was ruined in the last minute of the game. It just spells out everything with some white text on a blank background. Save your two dollars for taco bell or something.. The only flaws I had an issue with is the length of this game. Honestly though, for 2$, the experience I went through during my 10 minutes playing this game was still worth it. There was so much potential with this to have more endings than just the same one as well, due to all the different choice options. I hope you make another and longer game sometime. I really enjoyed it, the atmosphere, colors, graphics, and audio were awesome. Will play again, and will definitely be having my friends play it when they are over to get spooked. 7/10, nice little psych horror experience.. If you like games that mind "violates" you, then this is your game. So um.this is way interesting.. Well, that was a waste of my life. a good ten minutes I'll never get back. Don't waste your money--even though it's only 2 dollars. Buy a yoyo instead. It's much more interesting.. I don't recommend buying this game simply because it just doesn't have any substance to it. After playing it you pretty much feel nothing. You don't really feel like you've experienced anything. It wasn't entertaining, it wasn't scary (it startled me with sudden noise and screen change but I was never actually scared), and it wasn't thought provoking. You can pretty much just watch a video of this game and be done with it; there's no point to playing it yourself since nothing you do in the game really matters.. Up until the last minuet of this game, my review would of went completley diffrent. Dont worry, no spoilers here. I can see why this would be marketed as an "experience". I honestly would recommend this game to someone who enjoys a more cerebral passive experience as much as an inter-active one. I would however think that to charge for this is a little absurd. To recieve the same experience as the game, watch a walkthrough (make sure it is recent because the older versions of this game like yammimash's, arent complete) or a lets play.. Okay, so I played this drunk. Everyone is giving it bad reviews. I thought my character might have just been on drugs the whole time (much like "only if" (p.s. i recommend that game)) I liked it, but then again I understand how difficult it probably was to make this game. Had a great idea behind, loved the twist ending. Wish the character moved faster and wish they had spent more time making the levels with different endings. Overall don't feel like I wasted any money (since I sold trading cards to buy it anyways) haha well yeah. Super Drunk and my first review on a game. Have a great night y'all.(p.s. I'm not saying I recommend paying for this game, but if you happened to get a steam gift card and have some extra money left, pick it up.. Pretty basic game i personally think it was a waste of $2.00 honestly i liked it but there wasnt a second path and i would have like a different ending or even somehow where i wasnt locked up forever. Here's something to think about if you are considering this game: Have you ever wondered if a game was worth it, and went on YouTube and watched one of those "first 15 minutes of gameplay" videos? If you were to do that here, you will have seen the entire game. If you bought it for yourself, then, you would see those same few images and nothing else. Developers please add more content! So far it was entertaining but after 15-20 minutes you are 100% done the game. Choices don't seem to affect the outcome? Played through twice and chose different things and so far it seems like a pretty canned 20 minute experience. BUT I LIKE WHAT YOU DID. DO MORE. Make it like 2-3 hours at LEAST. Edit: I am very willing to change my review to "Recommended" if there is new content appearing. If there are differences within the game for the choices you make, or any sort of feature that makes the game last a bit longer, it is something I look forward to.
